

Consultant Services Director

Ref. 262

Placement of technical specialists in the oil and gas sector

Rewards: £135k salary + unlimited bonus + excellent benefits package

Here's a big opportunity for an exceptional top manager; could you be that person?

This exciting and influential position will complete the building of the Board for our client, Oilfield Production Consultants Ltd. This privately owned, entrepreneurial Company has been based in London since its start up 24 years ago and has offices on three continents. To back the growth ambitions of the shareholders, strengthening the top tier is regarded as essential. The core activities involve the assessment of oil and gas reservoirs, including asset evaluations, geological modeling, simulation studies and reservoir engineering. Service delivery is either through the provision of very senior technical specialists on medium-long term contract to the clients (oil and gas exploration and production companies all over the world) or via projects or studies managed by our Technical Division usually at the London office.

We are now looking for an outstanding individual who really does know recruitment to lead the long established Consultant Services Division, someone who has the outstanding people management skills to work with very senior technical individuals in (sometimes) difficult countries, with demanding clients and ambitious shareholders. This is a main board position and will be based in London with global travel.

Does this excite you? Read on.....

You should have a thorough understanding of the sub-surface oil and gas E&P arena and be able to combine your management, contract preparation and commercial expertise with good technical know-how in order to establish personal credibility with a broad spectrum of corporate and independent clients and senior consultants. You will be running the Divisional P+L with substantial client facing responsibilities, backed up by OPC's world-class technical resources and by co-directors with a can do/will do mentality. The culture of the business is for the leaders to be closely involved with their teams, routinely providing motivation and mentoring. However, it's your all-round relationship management skills that will be critical to the future growth and success that the Directors are focused on.
